October 2015

Moving through the Seasons

As much as we want it or not, Summer is coming to a close. No more laying in the sun, swimming at the beach, pool, walking outside, etc. Some of us will be sad that summer is leaving, and others will embrace the coming of fall for it's pumpkin spiced everything, playing in the leaves, decorating for the season and other fall activities.

We all have a special season that we favor over the others. As the seasons change, so do the seasons of our life. In Ecclesiasties 3:1-8, Solomon wrote this beautiful poetry. The very first verse he writes that there is a season and time for every matter under heaven. He then goes on and list the different seasons we go through in our lives. Just like winter and summer are opposite of each other, so are the seasons and time of our lives (cue days of our lives theme music).

Like I said, we all have a favorite season, and a least favorite season while the other two seasons are considered transistion seasons. But when I think about those transition seasons it made me look at a wider view of the seasons in our lives. For example, someone may love summer and hate winter, but no one is ever complains about spring and fall. When we look at the seasons in our life, sure in the midst of an unwanted season, it seems like everything is dark and gloomy. But we have hope that our wanted season in life is coming. The transition seasons are there to give us courage, hope, and anticipation. Sure there will be times when we go through that one rough season, but we have three other seasons in our life that gives us comfort and rest.

So when we go through the rough seasons of life, let us look at the lessons our worldly seasons have to offer and know that when we are out of season, in some time we will be back in season.
